

William,

Below is the policy statement from the Board of Academic Honesty.

You have my permission to post your report and project code under the following conditions.

1. Include a statement indicating your authorship in all files that you post.
2. Include a statement to the effect that anyone using the code must give you attribution.
  1. I would recommend you use the 'Creative Commons Attribution' license at a minimum, but you are free to use a more restrictive license statement if you wish.
3. These statements should appear somewhere in each and every file you post.
  1. In source code files, your authorship information and attribution rules should appear as comments at the beginning of each and every file.
  2. In 'report' files the attribution rules should appear as a footnote attached to the authorship information.
4. Your code should print out authorship information and attribution requirements as output when run. You may have to modify your project to do this.
5. To protect yourself, you should probably include this email from me and the attached email from the Board of Academic Honesty in the distribution.

I hope this helps. Best of luck in your future endeavors.

Yours,

TFP

Ted Pawlicki

Associate Professor of Computer Science, University of Rochester